THE BRIDGE TRAGEDY

Burrell He'd for the Killing of Mack-

Evidence Given Yesterday Before the Coroner's Inquest-The Fatal Knife Thrust.

Yesterday afternoon Coroner Hammett investigated Saturday night's tragedy on the Anacostia bridge. The body of the victim of the knife, Bryant Mackall, was kept in the morgue, where an autopsy was made on it by Deputy Coroner Glazebrook. Thornton Burrell, alias "Punk" Burrell the alleged slayer of Mackall, was present at the investigation, which was held at the sixth precinct.

The deputy coroner was the first witness examined. He said that the dead man was attired in rather dilapidated working clothes. He found a cut in the left side of the shirt bosom. The man's clothing and breast were smeared with clotted and breast were smeared with clotted blood. The only wound was a cut in the chest, and the weapon had entered the pleuro cavity, and the second rib was sev-ered. Witness found that the left lung had been cut, as had the sack covering the heart, in which he found four ounces of blood. There was also a cut in the pul monary artery. The injury was necessarily fatal, and it was surprising that the man had lived even five minutes. In answer to the coroner's inquiries, witness said the wound was evidently made by a sharp in-strument, probably a pocket knife. Coroner Hammett produced the knife blade found on the bridge, and witness said that the wound may have been made with Policeman's Testimony. Policeman Reagan of Anacostia testified that he was first told of the cutting by a boy named Cole. When he got to the bridge he saw a crowd of colored men. They were standing about the dead body of Mackall. Witness heard that Mackall had had a fight with the prisoner, "Punk" Bur-rell, and for that reason he was arrested. knife blade was given to witness by boy named Branson, who found it about twenty feet from where the dead man was lying. He did not know that the blade lying. He did not know that the blade had belonged to the prisoner. The handle could not be found.

Policeman Marr testified to the arrest of the prisoner. He went with Sergeant An-derson to the house of Burrell's father, but he was not there. Soon afterward they ar-rested the prisoner. He told witness that he had had a fight with Mackall, but denied that he (the prisoner) had done any-thing to the deceased. The prisoner told witness that two boys were with him, but he did not know their names.

"What's the prisoner's character?" the oroner asked. "He hasn't a very good character," answered witness. "He's been arrested several times. Sergeant Anderson gave similar testi-

Leonard Anderson testified that about 9:45 Saturday night he witnessed a fight on the bridge between Burrell and Mackall. There were four young golored men on the bridge, and he saw them take a drink. When Burrell came on the bridge Mackall was talking to witness. Burrell called to Mackall to come on. They used some profane language and then clinched. A bystander separated them, and they went together again. When in the middle of the bridge Mackall fell. He got up and went to the side of the bridge, where fell again.

William West, a resident of Garfield, and friend of the prisoner, testified that he was with friends Saturday night, and when they reached the Anacostia end of the bridge they saw Burrell, who asked if any of them were going home. Burrell and Mackall had some words, but witness did not know what the words were about. He heard Mackall call Burrell a _______?" asked Burrell. Burrell

Other witnesses gave evidence, and the jury returned a verdict holding Burrell responsible for the death of Mackall. He was thereupon committed to jail.

Reckless Driving.

To the Editor of The Evening Star: As an old subscriber and a man with family, permit me to protest, through your columns, against the reckless driving allowed on the main thoroughfares in the city. Yesterday afternoon about 5:15 o'clock my wife, child and myself, in a closed carriage, had reached Fountain Square, near 20th street, in Georgetown, and had stopped to permit the cable cars to pass before crossing the track to the right side of the street. While standing there a trap driven by a supposed gentle-man came dashing down M street at a ten-mile gait, and crashed into the carriage, tearing it apart and jeopardizing the lives of myself and family. The man, as usual was too careless to stop to see if we were hurt, but whipped up, crossed Rock Creek bridge at a trot and was out of sight before he could be stopped.

To the Editor of The Evening Star: Referring to the letter in your Saturday's issue of Mr. Geo. B. Loud of W. S. Hancock Post, No. 259, G. A. R., Department of New York, chairman of the committee which is arranging for an excursion to Washington and Gettysburg at the time of the dedication at Gettysburg, June 5, and who says that thousands will attend both dedications if they can be held on succeeding days, allow me to make the suggestion that perhaps a compromise could be effected in the matter of dates and Memorial day, the 30th of May, decided upon as the time—and a most appropriate one—for the Washington ceremonies, and the succeeding day for Gettysburg.

Improve Public Architecture. To the Editor of The Evening Star: Senator Pettigrew's wish that the entire structure of the new post office building were as combustible as the roof, and that that architectural eyesore might thus be prevented from being for all time a conspicucus disfigurement of the carital, voices, I think, the opinion of most people with any taste. Let us at least hope that there are enough men in Congress with some taste and knowledge of architecture to appreciate how hideous this building is, and that it will be an object lesson to them to aid in doing away with the utterly stupid and unesatisfactory system for providing plans for United States public buildings heretofore in operation. The measures advocated by the Public Art League have this end in view.

eine, or the Magic Kiss," is one of the honest efforts in comic opera that several seasons have produced. It is melodious without being cheaply finglesome, and amusing without, for the most part, being coarse. There have been a number of dreary things perpetrated in the name of omic opera this season; things that failed to touch the popular chord, in spite of the unlimited accessories of lavish display of pink fleshings, fluttering lingerie and topical jokes ad libitum. Madeleine has won ess by force of its quaint simplicity and consistency of purpose. Despite reminiscence of the Mascot, which the plot contains, the opera lays a stronger claim to originality than the majority of similar products. Camille D'Arville is a songstress of exquisite accomplishments, who, without any marked display of histrionic ability, aucceeds in thoroughly charming her au-dience by her voice and by her unaffected manner. W. G. Stewart sang the leading tenor role well, and Frank David labored industriously with the comic possibilities of the part of Dr. Gourmet, an epi-cure who has lost his appetite, Alice Gaillard was vigorously comic in the role of a woman in determined pur-suit of a husband, and Maud and Hilda Hollins did all that fell to their share with vivacity and finish. Despite certain lapses into the commorplaces of coarse fun, into the commorplaces of coarse fun, dcubtless intended as concessions to "the popular taste," Madeleine deserves hearty recognition as a work which is both humorous and idyllic.

Allen's Grand Opera House.—Bizet's "Carmen" was the bill presented by the Hinrichs company last evening at Allen's Grand Opera House, opening the second week of its engagement. Taken as a whole, week of its engagement. Taken as a whole, the production was pleasing, the costumes, stage setting and singing being up to a high standard. Louise Natali, as Carmen, acted the part with a great deal of art, while her singing was with excellent expression and intelligence. Alice Judson sang Michaela, her voice being noticeably good in the third act. F. Michelena probably carried off the honors of the evening in the part of Don Jose, the brigadier of dragoons. part of Don Jose, the brigadier of dragoons. His voice was in splendid condition, and his conception of the role was nearly all that could be desired. Louis de Backer made an excellent Escamillo, both in his rendition of the role was nearly all rendition of the part and in his singing, his fine physique adding much to the strength of his portrayal of the role. The second act was well received by the audience, and all of the artists came in for dience, and all of the artists came in for their share of the applause. The bill for tonight is "Rigoletto," with Louis de Backer in the title role. "Aida" will be sung Wednesday night, "Lucia" on Thursday, "L'Africaine" Friday, "Carmen" on Saturday afternoon, and Saturday evening a double bill, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Il Trovatore".

National Theater.-The reception extend ed to the "Governor of Kentucky" at the National last night was genuine and hearty. Mr. Crane made more friends, if any people remain who are not his friends already. In any event, as the governor of Ken-tucky he gave another touch to his art, tucky he gave another touch to his art, and people were as glad to hail him as "governor" as they have been as "Senator." As to this play, by Mr. Franklyn Fyles, it may be said that while not characterized by unusual strength, by surprising originality, by perfect probability and by one or two other qualities, it is not overdrawn, and made an acting caricature in voice and manner, and is in that ture in voice and manner, and is in that far satisfactory, while the plot and the in-cidentals are so designed and executed as to make a very pleasing result.

As the governor, Mr. Crane is, of course, what he should be, but the character is too near others of his on the same lines to make it striking. His rival for the senatorship, Col. Henry Clay Bingley, as presented by William Boag, a Washington actor, was as fine in its old-fashioned courtliness as anything we have had in Washington, and Mr. Boag was warmly greeted every time he appeared. Mr. Boag's work stamps him as a character actor of superior ability. In the same fashion of favor with the audience was Burr McIntosh's Daniel Poone Bingley of Breathitt county, not quite a typical mountaineer, but certainly an ideal one, and played to perfection. Another pair of winners were the twins, by Misses Margaret and Anna Robinson, and a dear, sweet girl was Jewel Esbrooke (Miss Blanche Burton), the governor's Wheelock's Carlisle Kenton was as Wheelockesque as usual. A gentle old character was the Private Secretary, by Percy Brooke. The scenes of the play are, as nearly as may be, reproductions of the governor's room in the state house, and the library in the executive mansion. A little incident not on the bills was a visit paid behind the scenes to the stage governor of Kentucky by the genuine governor of Kentucky, ox-Governor McCreary being in the audience and slipping around quietly between the last two acts to shake hands with his illustrious contemporary or sucwith his illustrious contemporary or successor, or whatever the stage one is to the actual. And these two governors of Kentucky, in the sanctified seclusion of the dressing room, never said a word about its being a long time between acts!

Academy of Music.—Something to make the heart of the gallery throb was the "Land of the Living," an original drama in five acts, presented at the Academy of Music last night to a fair audience. This is the play's first appearance in Washington, and its reception was warm outdoors and in. The first act of the play opens in England; thence, after "an elapse" of two years, it goes to Africa for the second act, and the last three acts are in England; years, it goes to Africa for the second act, and the last three acts are in England again. This allows of diversified scenery, and in respect of this the play is notable. As for the plot, it is of the usual melodramatic kind, good and strong, and is warranted to stir the blood. There is much villainy, but virtue triumphs, and the play ends happily. The hero of the play is Gerald Arkwright (Mr. Frank Karrington) of the firm of Arkwright & Tredgold, with Tredgold (Myron Calice) as the villain, both parts very well done. Little Marie Jonson plays the child's part nicely, and Miss Carletti and Miss Price, as Mrs. Tredgold and Mrs. Arkwright, are quite satisfactory. John Price, as Arkwright's father, did some good comedy work. An effective scene was London bridge at night.

Kernan's Lyceum Theater.-Flynn and Kernan's Lyceum Theater.—Flynn and Sheridan, those well-known caterers to the amusement public, presented a double show at Kernan's last night. One part was devoted to high-class white-face specialties, while the other was furnished by colored artists. The performance opens with a grand ensemble, introducing the entire company in songs, dances and funny sayings. Then come in rapid succession Dunn ings. Then come in rapid succession Dunn and Nicolai in a number of popular songs; Ward and Flatow, eccentric acrobats; Snyder and Buckley, clever musical ar-tists, and Billy Farrell and wife, the cakewalking champions. A dance of nations proved entertaining and a clever bit of originality. Exton and Weathers cracked a number of new jokes, and Julietta Nelson contributed a daring exhibition of tight rope walking. This was really the feature of the show, and her performance last night was marylous at a contributed as a second contributed last night was marvelous. An afterpiece entitled "On the Island" closed the show. During its progress the darker-hued members of the company indulged in some real old-fashioned buck dancing that was good. Mr. Stoddard on Japan.-"A Tour of Mr. Stoddard on Japan.—"A Tour of Japan," personally conducted by Mr. John L. Stoddard, was made by a large audience at Metzerott Music Hall last night. The lecture was the last in the entertaining course with which this popular traveler has been delighting Washington audiences for two weeks past, and when he shall have delivered it again tonight and tomorrow even-ing, he will say good-bye until another season. Japan is a wonderfully entertaining country as seen through Mr. Stoddard's eyes and described in his graceful language; her clever people and unique cus-******

Mr. Stoddard was full of pleasantries last night, so that both the subject and its manner of treatment combined to make the lecture one of the most charming is if the course. A feature of Japan, distinguishing and characteristic, the toril or encode gate, the Japanese love of flowers, the marvelous dexterity of the Japanese warkmen and the delicacy of their product the simplicity and happiness of the people and their cheerful, hopeful dispositions, the definitness of the ladies' native costumes, aphases of hotel life, the Lafayette Square Opera House.-"Madepositions, the dentiness of the ladies native costumes, aphases of hotel life, the paper-screened spoms, household mottoes, furnitureless uguest chambers and willing waitresses—all here touched upon by Mr. Stoddard, who glosed his lecture with a vivid description of a trip to Nikko and Haruna, in the heart of old Japan, where, isolated from the outer world, are the sacred souvenies of a dyirg religion.

Albaugh Dramatic Association.—The first Albaugh Dyamatic Association.—The first appearance of the Albaugh Dramatic Association was made last evening at National Rifics' Armory in the production of Alexander Dumas' three-act play, "The Danicheffs," before a large and appreciative audience. The rendition of the play as a whole was good and the different members of the cast supported their own roles with good effect. The role of Countess Danicheff, the star part in the play, was taken by good effect. The role of Countess Danicheff, the star part in the play, was taken by Mrs. Mary Hardy, while the honors for the male parts were divided between Mr. Edward H. Paudert as the count, and Mr. Theodore Hardy, as Osip, a serf. Mr. Joseph B. Fitspatrick was good as a French diplomat, and Miss Daisy Haynes as Anna was clever. The other characters in the work were taken by Lohn I. Dwyer Walter was clever. The other characters in the work were taken by John L. Dwyer, Walter Watts, Louis W. Stolp, John J.
